The problems with accounting software

Your tax return preparer will suggest – actually, they'll strongly recommend – that you use accounting software. DON'T DO IT!

There are 3 problems with accounting software:

First   Accounting software comes with a Costco-size shopping list of headaches and costs that you are better off avoiding.
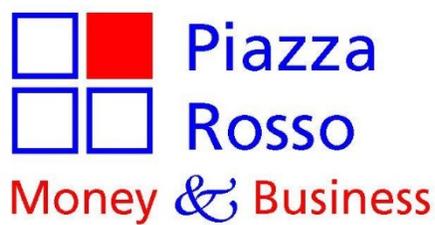

Second   It's easier – and cheaper – to set up and use the processes you need to run your business than it is to set up and use accounting software.

The most important processes are, of course:

++ Keeping track of the people and companies that owe you money and

++ Keeping track of the people and companies that you owe money to

Third   The only purpose of accounting software at almost all small businesses – and especially at new businesses – is to give your tax return preparer the information he or she needs to prepare your company's income tax returns. You only need to do this once a year.
